Remote Learning Update

That is the first week of February complete! Did any of your New Year's Resolutions last? Please remember that it is not really been the time to be hard on yourself! Trying to stop eating sugar or start an exercise plan doesn't seem right now. It's a time we all need to be kind to ourselves and each other.

The staff in our Pinehurst Family understand how you feel, they have worked hard on planning 'remote learning' for you and your child/ren. But they are not judging, if you can't get through things. It's just there for you to try to work towards. Do not 'beat yourself up' if you don't get everything done - we realise you have other things going on! Some of you are working from home, some out of the home, and some of you are just feeling a little 'down' at the moment, or running out of steam. Whatever you manage is ok.

Don't forget that there is so much maths in baking with your child, and science in the garden or outside space, and even looking out of the window and talking with each other is a learning opportunity in itself. It is ok to incorporate activities such as this at this time. This is not to take away from all the work teachers have done to prepare lessons and activities for you, but it's just realistic at the moment. Don't put too much pressure on yourselves as parents and carers or on your children.

We are planning 'catch up' for when we all get back together and we will just have to accept the differences in children's experiences over this time - it's just what it is. So good luck with all you are doing at home, it's ok not to be ok.

We are thinking of you and don't forget to contact us if you need anything.
